HERITAGE AT RISK IN LONDON

- Registered Battlefields at Risk
- Listed Buildings at Risk
- Scheduled Monuments at Risk
- Registered Parks and Gardens at Risk
- Protected Wrecks at Risk
- Local Planning Authority
We are all justly proud of England’s historic buildings, monuments, parks, gardens and designed landscapes, battlefields and shipwrecks. But too many of them are suffering from neglect, decay and pressure from development. Heritage at Risk is a national project to identify these endangered places and then help secure their future.

In 2008 English Heritage published its first register of Heritage at Risk – a region-by-region list of all the Grade I and II* listed buildings (and Grade II listed buildings in London), structural scheduled monuments, registered battlefields and protected wreck sites in England known to be ‘at risk’. A year later, this second updated regional edition of the register has been enlarged to include details of all scheduled monuments (archaeological sites) and registered parks and gardens, as well as conservation areas designated by local authorities that are also reported to be at certain or potential risk.

In London Region the Heritage at Risk register uniquely includes Grade II buildings in addition to those listed Grade II* and Grade I. Over the 18 years since recording of buildings at risk first began across the capital, the content of the register has changed and its reach has evolved to reflect the fact that the historic environment is all around us. Over 90% of the buildings on the original register have now been removed although every year new historic environment assets at risk are identified and added so that the register is only ever a snapshot of what is a dynamic situation.

This year the register also includes scheduled monuments, registered parks and gardens and conservation areas that present particular challenges. Multiple ownerships and the complexity of issues affecting these types of historic assets require a comprehensive approach to the management of risk. Conservation Area Appraisals and Management Plans are tools that already exist and have proved effective in these situations and English Heritage encourages partners and those managing change to use them.

There are an estimated 955 conservation areas in London, which has the largest percentage of suburban conservation areas of any region – a category that is particularly vulnerable to the small-scale, incremental loss of historic detail that leads to erosion of special character. In both urban and suburban conservation areas pressures from new development, both residential and commercial, has the potential to affect these special areas. In the context of local authority budgets under strain and limited capacity in the heritage sector across London, the challenges are not going to be easy to address. However it is not all doom and gloom; there have been significant successes – for example in tackling the problem of mansions in parks like Valentines Mansion in Redbridge. English Heritage also continues to work with partners in the High Street 2012 project that aims to revitalise the historic environment of east London in preparation for the Olympics. Working in partnership with the London boroughs, the Office of the Mayor, the Heritage Lottery Fund and the many local amenity societies and commercial and residents groups across London, English Heritage’s London Region has committed over £1,000,000 in the last year to repairing and securing the future of the historic environment of the city both for its communities and its many visitors.

Heritage at Risk 2009

The 2009 register for England includes 5,094 nationally designated sites that are at risk, along with 727 locally designated conservation areas at risk. These sites are important and irreplaceable elements of our historic environment and help contribute to local and national character. By assessing their condition and identifying which are most at risk, we can define the scale of the problem and plan and prioritise the resources needed to bring them back into good repair – and, where appropriate, into practical use – for the benefit of present and future generations.

The historic environment of London is under pressure. Despite the contribution it makes to London as a world city, significant elements are at risk. In particular, the addition of registered parks and gardens to the Register has highlighted the plight of London’s cemeteries and the monuments within them. Often overlooked, these landscapes have potential if restored and appropriately managed to make a positive contribution to both local communities and visitors.

London is often described as a city of villages each with its distinctive character and appearance, which is often recognised by conservation area designation. The addition of conservation areas to the register this year highlights the pressures on what is often the most valued element of the historic environment to local communities – the places where they live, work and shop. The pressures are wide ranging and complex and managing them successfully is particularly challenging. It is a challenge we have to work on together.

The table on the opposite page sets out the number and percentage of nationally designated assets that have been identified as ‘at risk’. The significant variations in the proportions at risk reflect important differences not only in the physical character of the historic assets, but also differences in the way in which they are used. Buildings generally have an economic value to their owners, particularly when capable of adaptive use. The percentage of Grade I and II* listed buildings at risk (3.1%) is thus lower than for the other asset types.

By contrast, assets that have far less economic benefit have higher percentages at risk. Archaeological monuments have little direct economic benefit and, as a result, often suffer from neglect, and a far higher percentage, 17.9%, is at risk. The main threats to historic landscapes, parks, gardens and battlefields come from either neglect or from unsympathetic development – 6% of parks and gardens and 16.3% of battlefields are currently at risk. The main threats facing wreck sites are from the forces of the sea and natural decay, and wreck sites have the highest proportion at risk (19.6%) of all asset types. The relatively low proportion of listed buildings at risk is also the result of work that has been put in by individuals and agencies over many years to identify them and then secure their future. English Heritage began assessing the condition of listed buildings in the 1980s, publishing the first annual register of Buildings at Risk in London in 1991, and the first national register of Grade I and II* listed buildings and structural scheduled monuments at risk in 1998.

The registers have enabled English Heritage and its partners in local authorities, building preservation trusts and funding bodies, as well as owners, to understand the extent of the problem and to prioritise action and resources. As a result, the proportion of England’s highest-graded (I and II*) listed buildings at risk has fallen steadily from 3.8% in the baseline year of 1999 to 3.1% this year: Of the Grade I and II* listed building and structural scheduled monument entries on the baseline register, 48% have now been removed.

While the condition of the nation’s Grade I and II* listed buildings has improved, this year’s Heritage at Risk registers show that England’s other nationally designated heritage assets face much greater levels of risk, and highlight the scale of the challenge and the resources needed, both at a national and local level.

Working with property owners and our partners, we aim to achieve similar progress in reducing risk to other heritage assets. This will be challenging in the current economic climate, given the high proportion of heritage sites that do not, even in more prosperous times, generate an income. Their importance as part of our heritage is nevertheless immeasurable, and their urgent needs must not be ignored.

Inclusion of sites on this register does not imply criticism of their owners, many of whom are actively trying to secure their future. While we have tried to ensure that the information included is accurate, we will correct any errors or omissions brought to our attention.

Further information on heritage at risk is given on page 20, and on our website: www.english-heritage.org.uk/risk. An interactive database providing detailed information on all heritage sites at risk nationally can also be found on our website.

The number of assets at risk in London is 541 (England, 5,017) and the total number of entries on the London register is 543 (England, 5,094). The difference is due to a small number of scheduled monuments with structural elements which are not also listed Grade I or II* and which are assessed as and included on the register as buildings at risk.

VALENTINES MANSION, REDBRIDGE

This late 17th-century house, remodelled in 1754, stands in an early 18th-century formal garden. The mansion was used as municipal offices by the local council until 1992 when it fell into disrepair. A steering group was set up in 2000 to produce a conservation plan for the restoration of the house and gardens with the involvement of English Heritage, the London Borough of Redbridge and the Friends of Valentine’s Mansion. A multi-million-pound repairs scheme, funded principally by the Heritage Lottery Fund and encompassing the house, garden features and landscape, has recently been completed. Valentines opened in February 2009 and will have a variety of uses. Image © Paul Riddle
Of England's 30,776 outstandingly important Grade I and II* listed buildings, 969 (3.1%) are at risk through neglect and decay (or vulnerable to becoming so). This year, the future of 69 buildings on the national register has been secured, while 64 newly identified buildings have been added. Of the entries on the original 1999 baseline register, 48% (685) have now been removed, but the rate of removal is slowing as we and our partners strive to resolve the more intractable cases.

In the past year, English Heritage offered £9.5 million to 113 buildings at risk: £8.5 million to 102 Grade I and II* listed buildings, £248,000 to Grade II buildings in London and £721,000 to places of worship (under the scheme we fund jointly with the Heritage Lottery Fund). Since 1998/99, we have offered £54.4 million in grants to Grade I and II* listed buildings at risk.

In 1991 London had the distinction of being the first region to compile a Buildings at Risk Register, which developed in later years, in collaboration with the London boroughs, to provide a framework for action. To remove buildings from the register requires a combination of persuasion, incentive and statutory action, but above all support, if they are to once again make a positive contribution both economically and culturally. The timetable is seldom quick, because most buildings are added to the register as a result of complex problems that take time to resolve. It is therefore particularly gratifying when one that has been on the register for a considerable time can be removed, because the immediate threat has been addressed or a longer-term sustainable solution has been found.

This year, 57 Grade I, II* and II listed buildings have been removed from the register, including Hoxton Hall in Hackney, on the register since its conception in 1991, and Valentines Mansion, Redbridge which first appeared on the register in 1995. Direct grant aid from English Heritage, the Heritage Lottery Fund and others has also rescued other buildings, including Boone’s Chapel, Lewisham and the Lychgate at Beddington, Sutton, but direct grant assistance is not the only solution. Many more buildings have planning and listed building consents granted for new uses, which should enable their restoration without significant public funds. However, the impact of the current economic climate has yet to be fully felt and English Heritage will be monitoring the implications of the financial downturn on the prospects for these buildings.

The profile of the register is evolving and listed civic buildings appear to be increasingly at risk. The decision to clarify the distinction between a registered landscape and the monuments within it has also led to a rise in the proportion of structures with no obvious beneficial use appearing in the register.

The emphasis over the last year was on empty residential properties and there are signs that concerted action is beginning to have an effect. An example is 6-10 Royal College Street where, thanks to the concerted effort of English Heritage and the London Borough of Camden, work has been completed on one property and is underway on the remaining two. This is a very positive outcome and bringing empty residential properties back to use remains a priority.
Since the launch of Monuments at Risk, almost 900 scheduled monuments have been removed from the ‘at risk’ category, representing a reduction of around 20% nationally. Since 2008 a rigorous checking and updating exercise has been undertaken by the regional teams. While this work identified some inconsistencies (not least the inclusion of scheduled monuments containing structural elements more suitable for the Buildings at Risk register), this reduction is irrespective of these changes. By any measure the improvement represents a remarkable achievement and demonstrates the validity of the Heritage at Risk initiative.

These impressive results should not make us complacent; highlighting the risk in order to begin a dialogue with owners of monuments is only the first stage of what can be a long process. While small changes in management can often do much to improve condition, securing the future of a significant proportion of monuments will require further study, partnership working and resources. This cannot be achieved overnight.

The Monuments at Risk assessment for Greater London revealed that 80% of scheduled monuments were at medium or high risk. It also demonstrated the wide variation in threats to these sites, ranging from development, neglect, tree and scrub growth, erosion, and structural problems to tipping and vandalism. The preservation of scheduled monuments is dependent on land use and most of London’s monuments are located on or adjacent to developed and urban land. Ownership arrangements are often complex and many monuments are buried beneath highways with associated risks from intrusion by utilities and services.

London has many nationally important monuments in public use; all with intense associated tourist and visitor pressures. These require stringent management, interpretation and access solutions that enable public enjoyment while simultaneously maintaining high conservation standards. Almost half of the scheduled monuments are principally owned by local authorities and nearly all of the above-ground monuments have some degree of public access, with a high proportion of these on display, in parks, gardens or heathland. In urban locations there are particular problems in maintaining scheduled monuments with no beneficial use, as the example of Conduit Head, Eltham, demonstrates. However, where a monument is in a publicly accessible location this helps in making the space more attractive to visitors and, with appropriate management and interpretation, more interesting and appealing. Partnerships between English Heritage and owners of monuments using Management Agreements are an established and highly successful way of improving their condition through regular maintenance, as at Northolt Moated Manor, Ealing.

Scheduled monuments are a tremendously important component of Greater London’s historic environment and their significance for local communities in cultural and aesthetic terms is greatly appreciated and valued. The vast majority of monuments are readily visible, many are on display and these ‘island’ sites are invaluable historic assets to local communities, especially in deprived areas, where they provide educational, recreational and amenity opportunities. In Greater London several community and local authority projects are using these themes as a key objective, such as at Stratford Langthorne Abbey, Newham.

CONDUIT HEAD, ELTHAM, GREENWICH
The ruins of the Tudor conduit that supplied water to Eltham Palace are in a public open space and have been repeatedly vandalised. The conduit is climbed upon and regularly covered in graffiti. Vegetation penetrates cracks in the brickwork and the interior is full of graffiti, rubbish and brambles. Discussions to find an agreed solution are under way.
NORTHOLT MANOR MOATED SITE, EALING
The Manor of Northolt dates from 1300 when manor buildings stood on a small island surrounded by a moat. It is now part of an important landscape adjacent to St Mary’s Church and Belvue Park. The banks and moat are choked by overgrown trees and scrub that threaten the preservation of the buried archaeology; additional risks are posed by vandalism. To improve the condition of the site we have entered into a management agreement in partnership with the London Borough of Ealing to use conservation volunteers to carry out works on scrub clearance, replacement of vandalised interpretation and removal of graffiti, with the aim of making the green space more attractive and publicly accessible.
ABNEY PARK CEMETERY, HACKNEY

Abney Park was London’s main non-conformist cemetery during the 19th century and its monuments include those to Isaac Watts and General William and Catherine Booth. Created in 1840, it featured 2,500 varieties of plants from the nearby Loddiges nursery.

The cemetery decayed rapidly after the Second World War and was purchased in 1979 by the London Borough of Hackney. It is managed by the Abney Park Cemetery Trust. Resources for upkeep have been limited; the chapel is a building at risk and the landscape and many of the tombs and monuments are in poor condition.

A Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) bid prepared with English Heritage and HLF funding is planned for submission in Summer 2009. Proposals include restoring the mortuary chapel and improving access.
There are only 1,600 parks and gardens registered for their historic interest, so each is very special. Diverse in style and size, they reflect the fashions and aspirations of past generations. These art forms are one of the foundations to our national passion for gardens and gardening. But all is not rosy and some are threatened by development pressures or are neglected and decaying.

For the first time, English Heritage is publishing a list of those that are vulnerable as part of its Heritage at Risk register. Some 6% of sites are considered to be at risk and most of these are deteriorating. The pattern of parks and gardens at risk is similar across the country. With the aid of the Heritage at Risk register, English Heritage is able to take stock of the pressures and challenges to the historic interest of these sites, and direct advice and grants towards those whose historic significance is most at risk.

This year, registered parks and gardens have been included in the register for the first time as a separate category. In London, over a quarter of the landscapes at risk are cemeteries, some of which were previously included on the Buildings at Risk Register because of the condition of the funerary monuments within them. There are a relatively high number of cemeteries at risk because, historically, the capital has had a significantly greater population than elsewhere. Disposal of the dead became very problematic as early as the 19th century, when churchyards were full and new cemeteries had to be created.

A significant proportion of the landscapes at risk are parks, for example Lamorbey Park in Bexley and Wanstead Park in Redbridge, where problems including divided ownership and a failure to reconcile often-competing uses leads to risk. The best way of managing registered landscapes and reducing risk is integrated management based on a well-informed conservation management plan, but this does require a longer term approach. There are also a smaller number of registered parks and gardens in London under pressure from potential development, including Crystal Palace and the Commonwealth Institute, where the creation of a new character within the existing landscape will need careful consideration.

CRYSTAL PALACE PARK, BROMLEY

The park was designed by Sir Joseph Paxton as a setting for the Crystal Palace, which was re-erected there in 1852-4. The focus of the park changed to sport in the late 19th century and the Cup Final was played there in 1895. Today, the landscape is deteriorating in condition and contains four buildings at risk including the Upper and Lower Terraces and former National Sports Centre. A masterplan for the repair and regeneration of the park and buildings, which English Heritage supports, has been called in for a planning inquiry.
The Register of Historic Battlefields contains 43 sites that have been selected as the most important, identifiable military engagements on English soil. These were often the turning points of English history – places where people risked their lives fighting for a cause. Not all regions have registered battlefields which are classified as ‘at risk’ in the national 2009 register, but as the case study below illustrates, such sites are vulnerable to loss because they can cover large areas of ground and their extents are rarely obvious. They often appear little different to other parts of the country, with their interest lying in their landscape, their archaeology and as a place of commemoration. Furthermore, while inclusion on the Register affords special consideration for the battlefield in the planning process, it does not protect against threats that do not require planning permission.

TOWTON BATTLEFIELD, NORTH YORKSHIRE
High, bleak, arable land near Tadcaster was the scene of a ten-hour battle on 29 March 1461 during the Wars of the Roses. Fought in a snow storm, the battle is said to have claimed 28,000 lives. Artefacts and arrowheads from the battle have been consistently targeted by metal detectorists, some unauthorised and working independently of any agreed archaeological survey. At least one episode of deep ploughing may have disturbed a possible mass grave. Today, the Towton Battlefield Society has a strong and active membership that seeks to protect the battlefield and promote research and education. © Glenn Foard

Not every region’s 2009 Heritage at Risk register features a shipwreck at risk, but in the English territorial sea as a whole the density of shipwreck remains is among the highest in the world. Our 46 protected sites represent a tiny proportion – just 1 in 706 – of the 32,476 pre-1945 casualties known to lie in the territorial sea. Wrecks are vulnerable to both environmental and human impacts. Because they are in remote locations, their management can be challenging – and changes to their condition are difficult to anticipate.

In 2009 English Heritage audited all designated wreck sites to better understand their condition and vulnerability. As a result, nine sites were deemed to be most at risk and are included on the national Heritage at Risk register – an example is Swash Channel off the Dorset coast (below).

SWASH CHANNEL WRECK, DORSET

In October 2004, archaeological assessment work in advance of channel deepening in Poole Harbour led to the discovery of this previously unrecorded wreck. A recovered fragment of Rhenish stoneware and the general form of the surviving structure of the vessel both suggest an early 17th-century ship, probably an armed vessel. Because of its national significance, the wreck was designated in December 2004. However, it is unstable and subject to dramatic shifts in exposure. Monitoring by Bournemouth University showed that 300mm of sediment had been lost across the site in just two years, resulting in the exposure of further sections of the ship to the destructive force of the sea. The vessel is now deemed to be at risk and English Heritage is working with Bournemouth University to implement a management plan to mitigate the loss. © Bournemouth University

DENMARK STREET, LONDON

At the heart of central London, the conservation area contains remnants of the dense pattern of narrow streets and alleyways that characterised this part of the city until the 19th century. Many of the buildings fronting on to Denmark Street date back to the mid-17th and 18th centuries and retain original features, although much altered by the insertion of shop fronts and signage.

For many years proposals for the Crossrail project have affected the area, resulting in a high level of vacancy and a clear deterioration in the quality of the building stock. Development proposals have still to come forward for many of the adjacent sites directly affected by Crossrail, but could have a significant impact upon the setting of the conservation area.
For 40 years conservation areas have been helping to preserve the special character of the nation’s best-loved places – not only at the heart of our historic cities and market towns but in the suburban neighbourhoods, former industrial quarters and rural villages that together give this country its irreplaceable distinctiveness. They can encompass many elements of the historic environment: buildings; spaces; designed landscapes and archaeological remains. In this sense, they are unique designations and their value lies in the experience of the area as a whole, as opposed to being simply a collection of separate buildings.

Conservation areas were introduced by the 1967 Civic Amenities Act as ‘areas of special architectural or historic interest the character or appearance of which it is desirable to preserve or enhance’ (s.79). Since then, more than 9,300 have been designated by local authorities across England. This means that we all visit, work in or live in conservation areas on a regular basis: they are part of our everyday life and represent what we value most about our surroundings.

Their designation is about recognising the significance of an area – what gives it its special character – and then about managing its future. Designation is not intended to prevent change or adaptation but simply to ensure that any proposals for change are properly considered. In many conservation areas the balance is working well, but we know that in some others ill-considered change is putting their special architectural or historic interest at serious risk.

Across England, about half of all conservation areas are rural, mainly covering the centres of villages and small towns, while about a quarter are urban and the remainder primarily suburban in character.

In London Region almost half of the designated conservation areas are in the suburbs and play a central role in the quality of life for local communities.

By their nature, conservation areas will be among the best environments in the country and they project a positive image to visitors and inward investors. The majority of England’s city, town and village centres are designated as conservation areas. Good conservation-area management can lead to better shopping areas, parks and gardens and residential neighbourhoods.

The vast majority of conservation areas enjoy strong community support through conservation area advisory committees, residents groups or local business groups. Where they work together with their local authority and supported by English Heritage, significant change can be brought about. An example is Forest Gate where the future of local businesses has been secured in part through the refurbishment and repair of the traditional buildings that have also become homes for new residents living above the shops.

WEBB ESTATE CONSERVATION AREA, CROYDON
The Webb Estate is a planned residential development created by William Webb based on a ‘Garden First’ vision. The houses are in an Arts and Crafts style but the special character of the conservation area is largely a result of the soft landscaping and spaces around the buildings. Managing this character is a particular challenge and the London Borough of Croydon has produced a comprehensive management plan containing a programme of proposed improvements that is an exemplar of good practice.
The 2009 Conservation Areas Survey

As the starting point to our Conservation Areas at Risk campaign we asked every local authority in England to complete a questionnaire about the condition of each of the conservation areas in its district. This is the first survey of its kind ever carried out. More than 70% of local authorities took part and the results are providing us with some very important information.

The good news is that most of our conservation areas are in a relatively stable state. From the responses received, we now know that the condition of more than 70% of them has not changed significantly over the last three years. Rather less encouraging, however, is the fact that only 15% of conservation areas have actually seen a positive improvement in their condition since 2006.

In the London Region survey 81 out of 486 sampled conservation areas are at risk, which is just 17% of the total. Where a local authority has professional staff and a heritage champion the percentage of conservation areas at risk is likely to be lower and the chances of positive change, informed by conservation area appraisals, are greater. Public realm issues remain a major challenge in London and the issue of loss of business confidence leading to under investment is also a potential threat to many of the urban conservation areas in the capital.

HOW DO WE REDUCE THE RISKS TO CONSERVATION AREAS?

As a result of our national survey we now have clear evidence that a conservation area is more likely to improve if the local authority has a dedicated conservation officer or an elected member who has been appointed as a heritage champion to promote the historic environment within the council.

Looking after conservation areas is a responsibility we all share – those of us who visit them to work or for enjoyment, those of us who own homes and businesses in them, those of us whose job it is to manage the spaces between the buildings and make decisions about their future.

Armed with the kind of robust information provided by this year’s survey we and our regional partners will from now on be able to direct resources and investment much more accurately towards those conservation areas at greatest risk, and those with the greatest potential to improve the quality of life and economic prospects of people in the villages, towns and cities of which they are such crucially important components.

In London a priority for the region is to support the role of suburban conservation areas in providing locally distinctive areas that are valued. With attention turning to Outer London and opportunities for employment creation and increased housing delivery, it is important that the special character of the existing context is used to inform decisions about change. This can be done through the production of conservation area appraisals. Maintaining the special character of existing areas against pressures for incremental change by management plans and existing tools including Article 4 directions are also a priority.

Reducing the risks

English Heritage is committed to securing a year-on-year reduction in the number of heritage sites at risk. This will be challenging with the additional assets now on the register and the varying nature of risk to each asset type. Each asset type and individual case will require a different approach and solution.

There are, however; approaches that are important for all assets at risk. Resolving cases requires working in close partnership with owners, local planning authorities and other relevant organisations and partners.

Advice and understanding are essential. Historic Environment Records, maintained by local authorities, provide a repository of information on local historic assets. They underpin the work of local-authority historic-environment services and can help improve the protection, conservation and management of heritage assets.

English Heritage provides on-line advice and guidance to local authorities, owners and managers of sites through the Historic Environment Local Management (HELM) website www.helm.org.uk.

Maintenance of heritage assets is essential to help prevent sites becoming ‘at risk’, and those that are already at risk from decaying further and the escalation of cost of their repair and consolidation. Buildings, for instance, decay rapidly when left empty. Avoiding vacancy through short-term lets or schemes that provide property protection through residential occupation are low-cost approaches that can maintain buildings until a permanent solution can be found.

LISTED BUILDINGS

English Heritage’s role in securing the future of buildings at risk is primarily to provide practical advice, guidance and resources to local authorities and owners. English Heritage’s involvement in cases is determined by the importance of the building and the complexity of the issues. English Heritage can help with analysis of the issues, investigation of the feasibility of options and brokering solutions. Although buildings at risk will continue to be a priority for English Heritage repair grants, grant-aid is limited in relation to demand. Grants from other public sources, notably the Heritage Lottery Fund, continue to be essential in helping secure the future of buildings at risk.

In exceptional cases, English Heritage may acquire and repair a particularly important building at risk, where it is clear that the scale and complexities are such that direct involvement is the best way of securing its long-term future.

Local authorities have a primary role in protecting the historic environment. The creation of a local ‘at-risk’ register is the first step in tackling neglected buildings in order to assess and monitor the scale of the problem and prioritise resources and action. Local authorities can also take action to secure the preservation of historic buildings through the use of statutory notices. Some councils have a successful track record, but generally these powers are under-used. It is essential that local authorities make best use of their powers to secure buildings at risk, to ‘stop the rot’ and prevent the costs escalating beyond the point where it is economic to repair.

To help local authorities make more frequent and timely use of their statutory powers, English Heritage runs a grant scheme to underwrite a significant proportion of the irrecoverable costs involved in serving Urgent Works and Repairs Notices.

Building preservation trusts can be the key to saving buildings at risk. Some trusts cover geographical areas; others specialise in particular types of building or are formed to save just one building. Determined individuals and trusts have saved numerous buildings at risk, working in partnership with other organisations such as local and national amenity societies, including Save Britain’s Heritage, the Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings, The Victorian Society and the Georgian Group.

SCHEDULED MONUMENTS

Although a significant proportion of scheduled monuments remain at risk, in many cases the problems can be reduced by either small changes to land management or better-informed decision-making. This is reinforced by the success in reducing the number of monuments at risk since the release of the interim figures in 2008, which shows how the simple act of disseminating information and advice can go a long way towards improving condition. English Heritage provides on-line advice to the owners and managers of sites via the Historic Environment Local Management web site www.helm.org.uk; through its Historic Environment Field Advisers and through the network of local authority Historic Environment Countryside Advisers that we have co-sponsored with local authority partners.

While many owners and managers of scheduled monuments address their long-term care on a voluntary basis, some monuments do require significant resources in order to stabilise their condition, to carry out repairs, or to change the way in which the land on and around them is used. English Heritage therefore works closely with the Heritage Lottery Fund to identify important sites deserving grant-aid and in partnership with Natural England who delivers the Environmental Stewardship agri-environment scheme on behalf of Defra.

The English Heritage National Monuments Record and local authority Historic Environment Records have increased the information available to land managers and we are continuing to develop their services, most recently through the Selected Heritage Inventory for Natural England (SHINE) project, through which owners will be able to view online information on scheduled monuments and other archaeological features on their holdings.

In all cases – whether for rural or urban monuments – close co-operation with owners and land managers is the key to making further progress.

PARKS AND GARDENS

The registered status of parks and gardens is a material consideration in the determination of planning applications. The new PPS 15 and its companion guidance will therefore help planning authorities to assess and mitigate the impact of development on our irreplaceable heritage of designed landscapes.

English Heritage can engage only with the highest-priority proposals for change and we shall be reviewing our priorities for casework as a result of this year’s Heritage at Risk register findings. We shall also continue to support the professional training courses and apprenticeship schemes that are vital to the long-term conservation of England’s historic parks and gardens.

English Heritage encourages the development of conservation management plans for registered historic parks and gardens, especially those in complicated multiple ownership. We are also keen for bursars and estate teams to use management plans to help conserve important but fragile landscapes in the care of schools, hospitals, hotels and other institutional owners.

Following our recent review of the grading of registered cemeteries we are committed to helping communities to raise awareness of the importance of their historic burial grounds. Towards this end, a new advice note on the conservation of memorials will also be published this summer as a successor to our more general guidance on the conservation of historic cemeteries, Paradise Preserved.

BATTLEFIELDS

The limited level of statutory protection that registered battlefields receive means that there is relatively modest direct impact that English Heritage can have on their future. English Heritage will work with owners to develop management plans for registered sites, and in appropriate cases, assist with funding management plans. We will develop positive landscape strategies with owners and partners such as Defra. In some circumstances, we may encourage the conversion from arable to pasture of especially sensitive locations to protect the battlefield archaeology and as part of a wider drive to prevent unauthorised or damaging metal-detecting.

English Heritage will also continue to encourage greater access to battlefields and improve their amenity value and visitors’ appreciation of the impact these historic events had on our development as a nation.

Local authorities can help reduce the risk to battlefields by designating registered battlefields as conservation areas, providing further protection and making sure that registered battlefields are explicitly taken into account in Local Development Frameworks. Local authorities can also invite comments from the Battlefields Trust on planning applications affecting the setting of registered sites.

WRECK SITES

At the strategic level, the major sources of risk to designated wreck sites have now been identified, and in terms of high-priority sites practical requirements have been identified in conservation management plans.

Risks to protected wreck sites can often be reduced through education, provision of marker buoys, or planning policies that take full account of their national importance. However, some sites require significant resources to stabilise their condition or to carry out detailed archaeological assessments of their conservation requirements. Although English Heritage has statutory power to allocate funds to promote the preservation and maintenance of protected wreck sites, its financial resources can solve only a small proportion of the problems.

In spite of the inherent difficulties with caring for this type of site, careful management must be maintained if we are to pass them on to future generations in as good a condition as reasonably possible. It is therefore close co-operation between the owners of protected wreck sites (where known), authorised divers and all organisations charged with care for the marine and coastal environment that will make the real difference to their long-term survival.

Practical advice on the management of historic wreck sites, whether at the coast-edge or under water, is available from English Heritage’s Maritime Archaeology Team (maritime@english-heritage.org.uk) and from www.helm.org.uk.

The register: content and criteria

DESIGNATION
All of the historic environment matters – but there are some elements which warrant extra protection through the planning system. Ever since 1882, when the first Act protecting archaeology was passed, government has been developing the designation system. Listing emerged from the post-blitz 1940s Planning Acts, and is now applied to about half a million buildings ranging from palaces to street lamps. Around 20,000 archaeological sites are scheduled, which introduces tight management controls, and some 1600 designed landscapes are registered, as are 43 battlefields.

English Heritage, as the government’s expert adviser, is responsible for making recommendations – but it is still the Secretary of State at the DCMS who makes the decisions. Understanding and appreciation develop constantly, which makes keeping the designation base up to date a never-ending challenge. While responding to threat-driven cases, we also seek to work strategically. Recent developments have seen a greater striving for openness, and better communication of what makes something special. This register includes the following heritage assets at risk:

• Grade I, II* and II listed buildings and structural monuments. In addition, the London register includes five cemeteries, churchyards and burial grounds at risk that are within the curtilage of listed churches or chapels, and contain tombs and monuments of notable quality, and are not areas designated as a registered park and garden
• scheduled monuments (archaeological sites)
• registered parks and gardens (including cemeteries)
• registered battlefields (where applicable)
• protected wreck sites (where applicable)
• conservation areas.

LISTED BUILDINGS
Definition
A listed building is a building (or structure) that has been designated as being of ‘special architectural or historic interest’. The older and rarer a building is, the more likely it is to be listed. Buildings less than 30 years old are listed only if they are of outstanding quality and under threat.

Listed buildings are graded I, II* and II. Grade I and II* are particularly important buildings of outstanding interest; together they amount to 8% of all listed buildings. The remaining 92% are of special interest and are listed Grade II.

Entries on the statutory list of buildings of special architectural or historic interest may comprise a number of separate buildings. Formal residential terraces are the most obvious example. Entries on this register reflect how buildings are grouped and recorded on the statutory list.

Criteria for inclusion on this register
Buildings included on this register are listed Grade I, II* and II and some are structural scheduled monuments. Buildings are assessed for inclusion on the register on the basis of condition and, where applicable, occupancy (or use). The condition of buildings on the register ranges from ‘very bad’ to ‘poor’, ‘fair’ and (occasionally) ‘good’. The register also includes buildings that are vulnerable to becoming at risk because they are empty, under-used or face redundancy without a new use to secure their future.

Occupancy (or use) is noted as ‘vacant’, ‘part-occupied’, ‘occupied’, or occasionally, ‘unknown’; for many structural monuments, occupancy is not applicable.

Assessing vulnerability in the case of a building in fair condition necessarily involves judgement and discretion. A few buildings on the register are in good condition, having been repaired or mothballed, but a new use or owner is still to be secured.

Buildings are removed from the ‘at risk’ register when fully repaired/consolidated, their future secured, and where appropriate, occupied.

Priority for action
Once a building is identified as at risk or vulnerable and included on the register, priority for action is assessed on a scale of A to F, where ‘A’ is the highest priority for a building which is deteriorating rapidly with no solution to secure its future, and ‘F’ is the lowest priority where a repair scheme is in progress and an end use has been secured.

SCHEDULED MONUMENTS
Definition
Scheduled monuments are our most valued archaeological sites and landscapes, England’s 19,719 examples have been designated because of their national importance. Scheduled monuments are not graded, and most have limited potential for beneficial use. They span more than 6,000 years of human activity, from prehistoric burial mounds to 20th-century military and industrial remains. For the millennia before written history scheduled monuments are the only testament to innumerable generations of people of whom there is no other record.

The later 20th century saw unprecedented changes to the landscape. As a result, types of historic site that once were commonplace began to become rare. Those that survive often represent just small islands.
of what once characterised broad sweeps of our towns and countryside. Although protected by law, scheduled monuments are still at risk from a wide range of processes. In particular, they can frequently be exposed to intense pressures beyond the reach of the planning system. These include damage from cultivation, forestry and – often most seriously of all – wholly natural processes such as scrub growth, animal burrowing and erosion.

Criteria for inclusion on this register
Once damaged or destroyed, scheduled monuments and the information they contain cannot be replaced. In 2008 English Heritage surveyed the condition of each of the nation’s scheduled monuments. This has allowed the identification of national and regional priorities for action. All the monuments included in this regional register have been identified as being ‘at risk’. Put simply, this means that on the basis of their current condition and vulnerability they are susceptible to significant loss to their fabric in the near future. They are then further sub-divided in terms of the severity of the threat that they face, ranging from those in ‘optimal’ condition (the best that can be achieved) to others whose ‘extensive significant problems’ are likely to be more difficult to resolve.

HISTORIC PARKS AND GARDENS
Definition
There are 1,600 designed landscapes on the current English Heritage Register of Historic Parks and Gardens of Special Historic Interest. These registered landscapes, which can be Grade I II* or II, include private gardens, public parks and other green spaces, country estates and cemeteries. They are valued for their beauty, diversity and historical importance but in contrast to the number of listed historic buildings this is a very small group of assets.

Inclusion on the register of parks and gardens brings no additional statutory controls, but it is a material consideration in the determination of planning applications. Local authorities are required to consult English Heritage on applications affecting sites registered as Grade I or II* and the Garden History Society on sites of all grades.

Criteria for inclusion on this register
The identification of sites at risk begins with a desk-top appraisal of the condition and vulnerability of each registered park and garden. This allows them to be provisionally categorised as at low, medium or high risk. These rankings are then checked by our regional expert advisers and adjusted to reflect steps already taken by owners to address problems.

Sites assessed as being at risk are typically affected by development and neglect. They have frequently been altered by development or are faced with major change. They are generally not protected by conservation management plans or conservation area status. The original function of these landscapes has often changed; divided ownership may also have resulted in the loss of the cohesive character of the place. Unless the entry gives information on the state of repair of the site as a whole, it should not be assumed that the surroundings are themselves at risk.

CONSERVATION AREAS
Definition
Conservation areas are areas of special architectural or historic interest the character or appearance of which it is desirable to preserve or enhance. Designated by local authorities, for more than 40 years they have proved a highly effective mechanism for managing change on an area-wide basis. There are currently some 9,300 in England including town and city centres, suburbs, industrial areas, rural landscapes, cemeteries and residential areas. They form the historic backcloth to national and local life and are a crucial component of local identity and community cohesion.

Criteria for inclusion on this register
In the first survey of its kind ever undertaken, English Heritage in 2008 asked every local authority in England to fill out a census form for each of its conservation areas. Responses were received for approximately 60% of conservation areas, highlighting current threats and trends. Based on the local authority’s own assessment, those which have deteriorated over the last three years, or are expected to do so over the next three years, are defined as being at risk – 1 in 7, or about 14% of the total in the survey.

This is the first step in building up a comprehensive national picture of the condition of England’s conservation areas. At present, the survey is incomplete, so the results need to be treated with caution. However, understanding the emerging trends will help English Heritage and local authorities to address those at greatest risk, and to mobilise local groups to reinforce their support for the historic environment in communities across the country.

BATTLEFIELDS
English Heritage’s register of historic battlefields has identified 43 nationally significant sites ranging in date from 991 to 1685. These are places where people risked their lives fighting for a cause; reputations were made or lost, history was set and people died. The outcome of these battles was influenced by where they were fought and traces of the events of the day will have been left across the landscape. Battlefields are cherished for many reasons, as a commemoration of the event and those who died, as a resource for understanding the course of the battle, and for the light they can shed on the times in which the battle was fought. They are vulnerable to insensitive development and to poorly managed investigation such as large-scale metal-detecting. While this designation introduces no additional statutory controls, one of its primary objectives is to encourage policies and other mechanisms that ensure that change and development affecting battlefields are sensitive and appropriate.

Criteria for inclusion on this register

Of the 43 registered battlefields, 7 are deemed to be at risk of loss of historic significance and are included on this register. The identified risks and threats come from:

- development pressure – for example, because they lie on urban fringes or are subject to development pressures within the site
- arable cultivation
- unregulated metal-detecting.

One major impact or a combination of several factors can be enough to raise the risk at a particular site. Of the seven sites deemed to be most at risk, five are in decline and two are stable.

WRECK SITES

Definition

England’s 46 protected wreck sites represent a tiny proportion of the 32,476 pre-1945 wrecks and recorded casualties that are known to lie in the territorial sea – just 1 in 706. Wreck sites can be of importance for different reasons: the distinctive design or construction of a ship, the story it can tell about its past, its association with notable people or events, its cargo, flora and fauna or its role as a focus for the local community.

The Protection of Wrecks Act 1973 empowers the appropriate Secretary of State to designate a restricted area around a vessel to protect it or its contents from unauthorised interference. Local authorities are able to react to foreshore infrastructure projects through the planning process, thereby securing the preservation of important remains in this intertidal zone.

Criteria for inclusion on this register

In 2009 English Heritage audited all designated wreck sites to better understand their current condition and vulnerability, the way they are being managed, and what needs to be done to ensure that their significance is maintained for present and future generations. As a result, nine sites were deemed to be at risk.

Key to the entries

ORDER

Entries are ordered alphabetically by London borough. Within each borough the asset types are grouped in the following order:

- listed buildings
- registered parks and gardens
- scheduled monuments.

Within each asset type, sites are ordered alphabetically by locality, street and site name.

Conservation areas at risk are listed together on page 113.

DESIGNATION

The lead designation is noted for each entry, and includes:

- Listed Building (LB) Grade I, II* or II
- Scheduled Monument (SM)
- Registered Park and Garden (RPG) Grade I, II* or II
- Registered Battlefield
- Protected Wreck Site
- Conservation Area (CA)
- World Heritage Site (WHS).

For buildings and registered parks and gardens, other designations that apply to each site are also noted. Their location within a conservation area or World Heritage Site is noted where applicable.

Given the difference in each asset type and also the varying nature of the risks to which they are exposed, there will inevitably be differences in how risk is assessed and how the information is categorised.

CONDITION

For buildings at risk, condition is graded as: ‘very bad’, ‘poor’, ‘fair’ and ‘good’.

For sites that cover areas (scheduled monuments, registered parks and gardens and wreck sites) one overall condition category is recorded. The category may relate only to the one part of the site or monument that is at risk and not the whole site:

- extensive significant problems (i.e. under plough, collapse)
- generally unsatisfactory with major localised problems
• generally satisfactory but with significant localised problems
• generally satisfactory but with minor localised problems
• optimal (ie the best we can realistically expect to achieve)
• significant decline
• unknown.

‘Unknown’ is noted for a number of scheduled monuments that are below-ground and where their condition cannot be established.

OCCUPANCY
For buildings that can be occupied or have a use, the main vulnerability is vacancy, or under-use. Occupancy (or use) is noted as follows:
• vacant
• part occupied
• occupied
• unknown
• not applicable.

VULNERABILITY
Principal Vulnerability is noted for scheduled monuments and may relate only to the part of the monument which is at risk, and include:
• animal burrowing
• arable ploughing
• coastal erosion
• collapse
• deterioration
• scrub / tree growth
• visitor erosion.

For registered parks and gardens, vulnerability is noted as high, medium and low.

PRIORITY
For buildings at risk, the following priority categories are used as an indication of trend and as a means of prioritising action:

A Immediate risk of further rapid deterioration or loss of fabric; no solution agreed.
B Immediate risk of further rapid deterioration or loss of fabric; solution agreed but not yet implemented.
C Slow decay; no solution agreed.
D Slow decay; solution agreed but not yet implemented.
E Under repair or in fair to good repair; but no user identified; or under threat of vacancy with no obvious new user (applicable only to buildings capable of beneficial use).
F Repair scheme in progress and (where applicable) end use or user identified; functionally redundant buildings with new use agreed but not yet implemented.

If the priority category has changed since the 2008 register, the previous category is given in brackets.

TREND
Trend for scheduled monuments, registered parks and gardens, battlefields and wreck sites may relate only to the part of the site that is at risk and is categorised as:
• declining
• stable
• improving
• unknown.

OWNERSHIP
A principal ownership category is given for each entry, although many scheduled monuments, registered parks and gardens, and battlefields are in divided ownership. For registered parks and gardens, single or multiple ownership is noted.

CONTACT
This is the member of the English Heritage regional team who acts as a first point of contact for the case, and to whom enquiries should be addressed. For Grade II listed buildings, the contact is the conservation officer at the relevant local planning authority (indicated by ‘LA’ on the register).

We are not in any sense agents for the owners of the sites included, but we will endeavour to put people in touch with them where appropriate.

Hospital for women built 1889-90 to the design of JM Brydon. Queen Anne style. Works to stabilise the original building and to rebuild the damaged Churchway bay have been undertaken and are now broadly complete. Listed building consent and planning permission have been granted for a mixed use scheme which sees the original building retained and restored, this work is now underway.

Monumental Gothic Revival hotel, built 1869-1873 to the design of George Gilbert Scott. Major scheme of repair completed including conservation of the grand stair paintings. Planning and listed building consent granted for restoration, conversion and extension on Midland Road. Works in progress to convert to residential/hotel and associated, phase 1 complete, phase 2 underway.

Detached house built 1838-40 to the design of George Basevi. Under refurbishment for residential use with new development but progress slow with extensive works yet to be completed.

One of a terrace of four houses, dating from the late C18, constructed from darkened multi-coloured stock brick with some stucco dressings. Comprising four storeys and basements. Property is vacant and in deteriorating condition.

Gasholders, 1864-1880. Now dismantled and stored in and around the remaining single listed gasholder. Relocation and reuse proposed as part of ongoing redevelopment for Kings Cross Central.

Single gasholder erected in 1883 for the Imperial Gas Light and Coke Company. Relocated and reuse proposed as part of the ongoing redevelopment of King’s Cross Central. The now dismantled three linked gasholders are stored at the base of this remaining standing one.

Terrace built circa 1793-99 by James Burton. Various degrees of deterioration and condition. Interest shown in several of the properties on a pre-application basis within the last year but no solution or scheme agreed to date.

Railings surrounding reservoir of 1856. Cast iron, with urn finials and secondary lower rails. Larger finials at each seventeenth upright. Moulded kerb of cast iron above brick plinth. The railings are at risk due to lack of maintenance which is causing damage to the plinth and ironwork.

Early C19 detached villa. Forms part of a builder's yard, and has been used as an office and also for storage. Poor condition, no progress, but in discussions with owners over refurbishment options.

Formerly St John's Church. Chapel built on site of the Kentish Town Chapel of 1783 by James Wyatt, of which the nave walls and apse remain. The rest was rebuilt in 1843–45 by JH Hakewill. Now occupied by religious group. English Heritage/Heritage Lottery Fund grant aided high level repairs to west end roof completed, but further works required.

Fountain set in circular pond forming a central feature of the Italianate garden, built circa 1913, probably to design of Harold Peto for Sir Arthur Crosfield. Site has been sold and pre-application negotiations with new owner about the whole site have started.

Four carved figures, circa 1913, probably part of Harold Peto's design for Sir Arthur Crosfield's garden. Two are now missing; the remaining two are in storage. Property has been sold and pre-application negotiations with new owner about the whole site have started.

Late C18 landscape park and lake by Humphry Repton, extended in the mid C19, and laid out as a public park in early C20 by Thomas Mawson. The mansion is now a private hospital. The parkland has deteriorated in condition and management is fragmented due to the separate ownerships. Enfield has produced a historic environment assessment as a first step towards repair and restoration of the park.

SITE DESCRIPTIONS

- The Greyhound public house, 86 Eltham High Street SE9: Unusual early C18 house with two entrance doorways. Vacant for a number of years and deteriorating.

- Walls around garden to north of Presbytery of RC Church, Eltham High Street, Eltham SE9: Brick walls C16 or C17 with trace of sloped coping. Possibly part of gardens to Eltham House. Structurally unsound; some top courses missing and in danger of collapsing into yards behind.

- 95A Eltham High Street, Eltham SE9: C17 or earlier stable building with 3 diagonal chimney shafts. Although it has been made weathertight, it is vulnerable to vandalism and pigeons. Previously in use as a joinery workshop, most appropriate future uses would be commercial/office use.

- Gatehouse to former Red Barracks, Frances Street, Woolwich SE18: Probably built in 1859 at same time as main Barracks building (now demolished), originally a Marine Infirmary. Roofless shell but structurally sound. Repair and refurbishment of railings and wall completed. Ruined remains of the gatehouse stabilised but long term use to be agreed.

- Garrison Church of St George, Grand Depot Road, Royal Artillery Barracks, Woolwich SE18: Italianate church of 1863, a roofless ruin after bomb damage in 1944. Failed temporary roof to east end which retains mosaics including one commemorating members of the Royal Artillery awarded the Victoria Cross. The last remaining Royal Artillery Regiment departed Woolwich June 2007. The future of the church is uncertain. The current garrison Quartermaster is responsible for maintenance and repair.

Terraced houses, mid to late C18. Suffering from disrepair and under use.

House built circa 1770 for Jonathan Hoare, a Quaker banker. Located in late C18 park, developed in 1880s into public park. Partly used as offices. The house is reserved by Act of Parliament for the community. A Heritage Lottery Fund Stage 2 application is to be made in March 2009 and if successful it is hoped that work will start on site in last quarter of 2009.

Early-mid C18 house. Recently in use as a mosque in the basement and offices on the upper floors, serving modern warehousing to the rear. Owner has had pre-application discussions with the local planning authority and is preparing a scheme for residential conversion.

Gothic Revival vicarage built 1873-4 to design of James Brooks. Feasibility study grant aided by English Heritage to assess condition and explore compatible new uses. Proposals are now awaited from the owners.

Early C19 terraced house suffering from under use and lack of maintenance.

Town Hall

Town hall built 1904-5 to the design of AS Taylor and R Jemmett, in an Edwardian Baroque style. The local authority has approved a scheme for use of small business centre and function rooms and a housing scheme for Clyde Road Depot site.

Monuments in Churchyard

Churchyard. A number of monuments are collapsing, including some listed in their own right. Harrow Council secured funding towards a scheme of repair which has been given to the Parish Church Council to implement a survey of the monuments. The extent of necessary repairs has now been established and repair works are underway.

Brick Kiln

Lower part of a C18 brick kiln conical chimney of which the upper part no longer exists. In urgent need of structural stabilisation and repair.

Cannons Farm Barn

C17 barn with 3 bays and narrow central bay. An Urgent Works Notice was served on the owners in 2008 and the works required are being carried out. Works include stabilising of the structure, replacing lost timbers and making the structure wind and weathertight.

The Hermitage

The building is a partially timber-framed, rendered, two-storey cottage of two bays that probably dates to the late C16 or early C17. The building is in a state of disrepair with cracks in walls, peeling paint and render, holes in ceilings and broken roof tiles. All are causing damp problems.

East Barn

Late C16 timber-framed 3-bay barn with sweeping old tile roof. Previously used for storage but converted into residential accommodation. Works to repair and convert the building are close to completion.

Site comprises main building and two flanking stable buildings of early C18 date. Hospital may close. In the interim the house will continue to be used for teaching. A long-term use needs to be identified. Extensive propping of the south facade has taken place.

Site comprises main building and two flanking stable buildings of early C18 date. Designed in 1918, it has a large auditorium used historically as lecture hall/cinema or concert hall and was converted to a gymnasium in the 1960s. The building is vacant and in very poor condition. RAF Uxbridge has been sold by the Ministry of Defence to a private-sector consortium on a long lease. Hillingdon Borough Council has now adopted a Supplementary Planning Document for the whole site.

SITE NAME: Commonwealth Institute, Kensington High Street W6

The Commonwealth Institute designed by Robert Matthew, Johnson-Marshall and Partners is the most important public building in Britain of the late 1950s. It is also the most dramatic example of the short-lived fashion for hyperbolic paraboloid roof structures. The Institute building and its associated listed structures are an integral part of the designed landscape in which they sit. Vacant since 1995.

SITE NAME: Commonwealth Institute (grounds)

Garden for the Commonwealth Institute (1960-2). Outline design by architects Robert Matthew and Johnson Marshall refined and detailed by Dame Sylvia Crowe; showing a strong unity between architecture and a designed landscape. The Institute has been vacant since 1995. The garden and hard landscape features are in need of restoration and the Institute building is at risk. Discussions are being held to discuss the future use of the site.

Repairs to listed memorials have been carried out, funded by the Mitcham Conservation Area Partnership Scheme. Initial study of the churchyard/cemetery completed as basis of detailed strategy and management plan. Grant-aided works undertaken, but not fully implemented. Some tree surgery and clearance of vegetation has taken place.

Mid to late C18 and part C19 snuff mill powered by water. The North Wing is subject to a S.106 agreement. Slow progress towards resolving outstanding planning obligations to rectify defects in the building, which will enable a lease to be entered into to allow the occupation of the North Wing by Wandle Industrial Museum. Recent action by officers has brought together all parties to solve outstanding issues.

Brick with timber framing comprising base of hollow-post windmill. Located within the car park of Windmill Public House with its timber superstructure exposed to the elements. The new owners have engaged the services of a conservation architect; a scheme for repair of the timber framework is being prepared in consultation with timber conservation specialist.

Fragment of Medieval and probably later precinct wall of former Merton priory. Constructed from flint and rubble stone, it is being damaged by vegetation growing out of the wall structure. The main problem is ownership and control of the flats in Windsor Avenue which appear to be privately rented.

Abbey Mills Pumping Station built 1865-8 by Sir Joseph Bazalgette. South east wing and cupola restored 1999. Still operational, but long-term future uncertain. An options appraisal considering all possible future uses for the buildings on the site has been completed. Conservation Plan, part funded by English Heritage, has also been completed. Townscape Heritage Initiative bid submitted to Heritage Lottery Fund.

Priorities for Buildings

- A: Immediate risk of further rapid deterioration or loss of fabric; no solution agreed.
- B: Immediate risk of further rapid deterioration or loss of fabric; solution agreed but not yet implemented.
- C: Slow decay; no solution agreed.
- D: Slow decay; solution agreed but not yet implemented.
- E: Under repair or in fair to good repair; no user identified; or under threat of vacancy with no obvious new user (applicable only to buildings capable of beneficial use).
- F: Repair scheme in progress and (where applicable) end use or user identified; functionally redundant buildings with new use agreed but not yet implemented.

Restaurant, built 1883 to the design of Vigers and Wagstaffe in a free classical style. Repaired and 'mothballed' by the London Docklands Development Corporation. Ownership now with LDA and part of the Royals Business Park. No current plans for the building.

Offices, built 1883 to the design of Vigers and Wagstaffe in the manner of Norman Shaw. Repaired and 'mothballed' by the London Docklands Development Corporation. Now owned by LDA and part of Royals Business Park. No current plans for the building.

Tide Mill 1776, last used in 1941. Four undershot water wheels. Much of machinery remains, though much of it is dismantled. Wheels in very poor condition. Waterways Trust is working with the owners and other partners including British Waterways and English Heritage to take restoration process forward to enable fuller use of building and to allow more regular opening to the public.

Social club, former house. Incorporates brickwork from circa 1760; expensively remodelled in 1880s. In use but suffering from water ingress and lack of maintenance. Repairs to roof to be undertaken in 2009 with grant from English Heritage.

Weatherboarded C16 timber-framed public house. Pantiled roof in deteriorating condition. Building currently boarded up. Local Authority carried out works, earlier this year, to secure the property and make it watertight following non compliance with Urgent Works Notice part funded by English Heritage. The council is working with partners, including English Heritage, to secure the future of the property.

Early C18 grotto in Carshalton Park. The exterior of the grotto has symmetrical curved walls of brick, ramped up gradually to a central peak. The grotto is extremely vulnerable to vandalism and graffiti. The local authority have completed a restoration strategy document.

Early Victorian bridge (1842-1845) over Regent's Canal. Arched bridge in red brick with stone voussoirs. The balustrade on the west side has collapsed taking the cast iron panels and granite setts into the canal. Some of these have recently been recovered. The local authority are commissioning a structural survey and are considering options for funding repairs.

Bandstand 1899. The railings are corroding and causing the stonework plinths to spall. Section 106 funds have been allocated for a repair scheme for bandstand and gardens. The local authority is preparing brief to restore gardens and the bandstand.

Part of mid to late C19 terrace of shops and houses. Stucco facade, enriched, bracketed eaves cornice and quoins. Recently sold, awaiting new proposals. As part of the whole terrace, front facade to be carefully restored as through LB of Tower Hamlets and English Heritage PS/CA project.

Decorative gates and railings forming front boundary to redundant St Clements Hospital. Ongoing discussion with Homes and Community Agency (HCA), formulating proposals for repair and regeneration of these frontage buildings including the front wall, gate piers and gates.

Note: If the priority category has changed since the 2008 register, the previous category is given in brackets.

Early C18 terraced house. Three storeys with basement and attic in painted brick. Applications to repair and restore this property have been submitted to LB of Tower Hamlets.

C18 walls, formerly belonging to a house, now demolished, on the adjacent site.

Built 1929-30 as the Granada Cinema to the design of Cecil Masey with fine art deco and Moorish style; the interiors by Theodore Komisarjevsky. Planning permission refused for use as a place of worship. Negotiations currently taking place with owner for suitable future sustainable use.

C16/C17 timber framed dovecote, the last surviving structure from the historic Chingford Manor of Gowers and Buckerells. Currently in a poor condition as a result of deterioration of the timber frame and repeated vadalism.

1840 chapel to hospital (formerly a workhouse). Being maintained. Long term use to be determined as part of hospital site.
